HENSLIN AUCTIONEERS 'SOLD' on National Auctioneers Day Sat., April 16, 2011

The third Saturday in April marks a special day in the lives of auctioneers every year as 'National Auctioneers Day' is celebrated. This special day is recognized by auctioneers as a day to reflect back on one of history's oldest professions and celebrate the industry's future.

Auctioneers celebrate 'National Auctioneers Day' by offering their 'voices' to a range of charities and philanthropies as a way of giving back and giving thanks to the communities and customers they serve. It is estimated that approximately a quarter-trillion dollars in goods and services are sold by live auction every year in the United States.

Online or on the lawn, auctions continue to grow in popularity with consumers.

Bidders enjoy the thrill of competition with an auction and the rush that comes with the chase for treasures.
